SHRAPNEL IS EUROPE'S MOST DEADLY WEAPON

Million a Month Now Being Used—Many Made in America

Shrapnel possesses greater mangle power than any other kind of ammunition used in modern field artillery, and that is why more than 1,000,000 a month are being used by the European armies now in the field. Thousands of shops and factories in this country and in Europe are working night and day to supply this demand, says an article in Machinery Magazine.

A superficial examination of a shrapnel shell discloses little to indicate its destructive power—it is simply a small steel shell attached to the end of a brass case, but when properly adjusted and fired from a modern field gun this shell becomes a veritable machine of destruction. Within the brief period of four and three-fourths seconds it has traveled more than one mile, and seven and one-fourth seconds later it is nearly three and three-fourths miles distant from the gun. At any time during this rapid flight it can be made to explode with marvelous precision and deadly effectiveness.

THIS FUSE IS TIMED.
Each shell has a time fuse that is made with the accuracy of a watch. This fuse is graduated in seconds and is set to explode at a given range. As soon as the gun is fired, the fuse is ignited automatically, and when the explosion occurs in the base of the shell itself, the forward end is blown out and a shower of lead bullets hurled forward in conical formation, the shell acting as an aerial gun. The velocity of these bullets exceeds the velocity of the shell at the time of the explosion by from 250 to 300 feet a second and they cover a cone about thirty yards wide and 250 yards long.

The first shrapnel shell (invented in 1744 by Lieutenant Shrapnel) was merely a cast iron ball filled with lead and powder, which was exploded by a crude fuse attached to the shell. This type was unsatisfactory because the bullets flew in all directions when the shell exploded. Later this defect was partially overcome by inserting a steel lined diaphragm which caused the bullets from the bursting charge. Modern shrapnel is similar in principle to its early predecessor.

THE MAKE-UP OF A SHELL.
The shrapnel shell used by different governments at the present time is made on the same principle, but differs somewhat as to size and in the arrangement of the fuse. A complete shrapnel comprises a brass case containing a heavy charge of smokeless powder for propelling the projectile, a hollow steel shell containing a large number of lead bullets and a bursting charge, and the combination time and percussion fuse which forms the point of the shell.

The sudden motion of the shell at the time of firing causes a small plunger in the end of the fuse to fly back and strike a cap which ignites the fuse. This fuse is composed of a slow burning composition that is pressed into angular grooves. One of these grooves is in a stationary ring and the other in a graduated movable ring.

By turning the graduated ring the length of this fuse is varied so that the shell may be exploded at any time within a period of about twenty seconds. During this brief period a three-inch American shrapnel will travel about 6,500 yards, or nearly three and three-quarter miles.

THE FRENCH FUSE.
The French fuse differs from the movable ring type used in other countries. In this respect, the slow burning composition is contained in a tube wound spirally around the fuse head. The fuse is set by piercing a hole through this spiral tube, so that connection is made with the interior of the fuse body. When the gun is fired and exploded, a flame passes out through the pierced hole and ignites the "ropo" powder fuse.

The effective length of the fuse depends upon the position of the plunger, which is made by a special machine attached to the gun, the plunger being located with reference to suitable graduations. Now these are so arranged that the shell will be exploded by the explosion if it should strike before the ring of powder burns around to the second plunger. This is effected by a small flame passing out through the shell strikes and fires the bursting charge instantaneously.

Shells of the 3-inch size contain from 210 to 300 lead bullets about one-half inch in diameter, which are embedded in a resinous mixture. This mixture, as it is called, serves two purposes. It holds the bullets in position and also acts as a tracer to indicate by a cloud of smoke the point at which the shell explodes. This smoke cloud is important especially at long ranges and when adverse atmospheric conditions exist.

EXPERT ON VOLCANOES LOOKS INTO LASSEN PEAK

Reports Crater Bores Are Filled and Are Still Steaming

(By Associated Press.)
DRAKEBATH, Cal., May 28.—Information brought down from Lassen Peak by Prof. R. S. Holway, of the University of California, who, with a party of four others, climbed the volcano yesterday and looked into the crater, were today issued. The flow of mud from the mountain was taken to indicate that the crater is still hot. The valley probably did not, as feared, contain sufficient water to ruin the soil of the farm and meadow lands overhauled.

Lassen was quiet yesterday when Prof. Holway and his party arrived. His report is that the crater boulders which he reported to be filled with lava, were still steaming, but the lava pressure, were the investigators were on the mountain, was not so high as a fresh eruption. Prof. Holway was planning to visit the crater today to examine the lava flow. Search is being made for George Sorahan, who was reported to have been since the floods swept Hat Creek valley. He is on route to his brother's ranch, and it is feared he was caught.

Washing Won't Rid Head of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use your fingers to bring the scalp and hair in gently with the finger tips.

If you do not do this, the dandruff will not go away. If three or four of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.—(Advt.)

BRENAU COMMENCEMENT BEGINS AT GAINESVILLE

Twelve States Are Represented in Graduating Class of Well-Known College

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
GAINESVILLE, Ga., May 28.—The closing chapter of Brenaue commencement exercises of the college of the industrial college, the June 5, with the alumnae reception, which will be a grand affair, will join the students of today.

The purpose of the inquiry will be to ascertain the cause of, and if possible, a remedy for, the too frequent breakdowns of the submarines. No effort would be spared, it was announced to remedy the weakness in the navy's underwater craft.

"What I am most interested in," said Secretary Daniels, "is in finding out whether these breakdowns were such as must be expected in more or less experimental boats or whether they were due to faults of construction that should have been remedied or to defects in our system of reporting and making repairs."

Secretary Daniels pointed out that all of the submarines in trouble recently were designed before 1912. Various causes are assigned for the ineffectiveness of the submarines in the recent maneuvers including battery and other troubles. The secretary expressed the hope that the battery trouble would be eliminated in the navy's newer submarines and added that the other troubles were being eliminated with each new design as the defects of the old designs became apparent.

DANIELS IS INVESTIGATING TROUBLES OF SUBMARINES

Secretary Wants to Find Out Why There Are So Many Breakdowns

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, May 28.—Secretary Daniels was going ahead today with his plan for an extensive inquiry into the disabling of submarines which had been assigned to take part in the recent war game with the Atlantic fleet. Unofficial reports said that half of the twelve underwater craft had been disabled.

The purpose of the inquiry will be to ascertain the cause of, and if possible, a remedy for, the too frequent breakdowns of the submarines. No effort would be spared, it was announced to remedy the weakness in the navy's underwater craft.

"What I am most interested in," said Secretary Daniels, "is in finding out whether these breakdowns were such as must be expected in more or less experimental boats or whether they were due to faults of construction that should have been remedied or to defects in our system of reporting and making repairs."

NINETEEN MINERS DIE IN EXPLOSION IN MINE

Men Were Buried Under Tons of Debris and Were Killed Instantly

(By Associated Press.)
NANAIMO, B. C., May 28.—Volunteers were prepared today to enter the lower workings the reserve mine of the Western Fuel company, in search of the bodies of nineteen miners who were buried in the west level last night after the explosion of inflammable gas had erupted them under tons of coal and debris. The bodies of three miners already have been recovered and the fourth man was so badly injured he is not expected to live. Thirteen others, who had descended into the mine a few moments before the explosion, escaped to the surface unhurt.

Scant hope was held that any of the entombed men could be rescued alive, and on the theory that they met a quick death following the explosion a search was abandoned last night and mine officials turned their attention to restoring the systems of ventilation throughout the lower levels. The progress of the searchers was impeded by accumulations of masses of debris which blocked the passages.

Through the night scores toiled in delays to clear the openings and send air into the mine in the slight hope that life might still remain with the imprisoned.

The origin of the explosion was to be made the subject of a searching investigation.

MIMS AND COLE SPEAK TO VANDERBILT ALUMNI

First Annual Celebration of Founders' Day Held at Piedmont-Driving Club

Declaring that "there should be no unhealthy competition between 'little houses,'" Dr. Edwin Mims, head of the department of English at Vanderbilt university, summarized the attitude of the university toward the new institutions of learning that are being erected as a result of the final adjustment of the controversy over the control of Vanderbilt.

Dr. Mims was speaking to Georgia alumni of Vanderbilt at their first celebration of Founders' day at the Piedmont-Driving Club Thursday night.

"Vanderbilt alumni of Atlanta," said he, "are naturally loyal to the institutions of this city—you have the pride in them, that patriotic citizens ought to have. Vanderbilt rejoices with you in their success. If I interpret the spirit of Vanderbilt, it is not an exclusive one, recognizing that it takes all sorts of institutions to wage battle for intelligence and righteousness. There ought to be a common purpose dominating us all in this long warfare for the emancipation of man."

"But while you richly cherish these institutions that flourish in your midst, be sure that you have loyalty for your alma mater and that this tie is one of the most sacred of life."

NO BREAK IN TRADITIONS.

There has been no break in the traditions of the university—no recognition of our ideals. If some have misinterpreted and misunderstood us, we can say that the new Vanderbilt is the old Vanderbilt working in the spirit of a new day. The fact that not a member of the faculty has resigned, nor a member of the board of trustees, nor a member of the faculty has remained unshaken in its loyalty, that our student body has manifested increasing devotion, goes to show that the policies that have dominated us in the past will continue to be ours.

"The Vanderbilt of the present is worthy of the Vanderbilt of the past. It is a matter of universal comment that the university has this year had its best year. More constructive work has been done by the faculty and by the students than in any group of years in its history. The medical department, with new endowment and equipment, has undertaken the work of maintaining the same high standards that have prevailed in the academic department. The academic department has not only been larger than ever, the freshmen class breaking all records in both number and quality, but in the reorganization of the curricula, in providing new means by which intellectual ideals of students will be fostered and by tightening the work at every point, the faculty has made important contributions that can even yet be scarcely estimated."

Hon. Whiteford R. Cole, secretary of the board of trustees, was an honored guest by Dr. Mims. He told of the termination of all litigation involving the university and said it tribute to the magnificent leadership and devoted loyalty of Chancellor James H. Kirkland.

SOME INTERESTING FIGURES.

Mr. Cole gave some illuminating figures on the growth of the university during the twenty-one years that Dr. Kirkland has served as chancellor. He showed that the property values of the university had increased from $600,000 in 1894 to $1,350,000 in 1914; that the endowments in 1894 were $250,000 and in 1914 $2,450,000. He said that notwithstanding the fact that the standard of entrance requirements had been constantly raised, the attendance at the university had increased from 744 students in 1894 to 1,740 students in 1914.

Speaking of the medical department, Dr. Cole declared that as a matter of fact there was practically no medical department at the university when Dr. Kirkland was named chancellor in 1894. He said that the medical department had been created by the medical department and given to the university.

The speakers were introduced by Morris Brandon, who presided as toastmaster, and John A. Hynds, a classmate of Dr. Mims.

The following officers of the Atlanta alumni association were elected for the coming year: Morris Brandon, president; John Paschall, vice president; Hamilton Douglas, Jr., secretary; and Hinton J. Hopkins, treasurer.

Enthusiastic telegrams, telling of the Founders' day celebration in Memphis and Birmingham were read during the meeting.

Spelling Bee 'Is on Program at Second Baptist Church Tonight

Judge Nash R. Broyles, Dr. W. E. Campbell and other prominent Atlantans got out the old-blue-backed spelling book and commenced it thoroughly, fixed whether separate is spelled with an a or an e and settled in their minds the proper places for 'Is' and 'a'.

Friday evening at the Second Baptist church will witness the fruits of their labors when they captain two sides in an old-fashioned spelling bee. A beauty contest will also be given.

Professor M. L. Brittain and Dr. John E. White will give out the words. Judge Broyles says his side is going to win. It takes all the world for some to learn, and Dr. Campbell declares they will have to go outside the English language to defeat his bunch.

BAKERS END CONVENTION WITH BANQUET IN ANSLEY

Elaborate Seven-Course Dinner Served Visitors Thursday Night

From a big oven erected at one end of the Ansley banquet hall an unusual delicacy—a live chicken—was served to the guests at the dinner of the bakers' association. The bakers' association, Thursday evening by Julian Boehm, who was dressed as a full-fledged baker. But the "chicken" immediately began to dance and sing to the accompaniment of an orchestra, for she was none other than Miss L. H. Smith, a local actress.

But this feature was only the crowning glory of the elaborate seven-course feast, which was served, followed by after-dinner vittles, after which the tables were cleared away for the hundreds to dance.

The hall was gayly decorated for the occasion, while every diner wore a paper imitation baker's cap. Between courses music was rendered by a string orchestra and by Miss Eya Lynn, high soprano and artistic whistler. After the fifth course balloons were scattered from wire stretched across the ceiling. About three hundred bakers were in attendance at the last event of this, their first annual convention.

HAYWARD AND CLARK'S COTTON LETTER

NEW YORK, May 28.—A large and important group of cotton growers concern in Liverpool and Manchester writes: "With the present depressing conditions of the cotton market, the position of the cotton grower is becoming increasingly difficult to see how prices can be maintained. (Being to the narrowness of the market, the small but important group of growers) is merely an artificial and temporary support. We look for gradual further depression. The

Other Manchester advisers are likewise unfavorable, saying that manufacturers are not ready to accept a business at sacrifice prices merely to maintain their labor organization.

Some immediate development opportunities was in the weather direction. A general abundant rainfall occurred in south Texas, the central and eastern states, effectively eliminating drought conditions in much of the present. Fair weather prevailed in the per half of Texas. Indications are for clear weather in the west and further showers in Alabama and the Atlantic.

Overnight political news was considered

Our market opened 3 to 4 points lower on weather selling, but trading was so narrow that the market was not able to make any comparisons of mill takings and covering the week and caused prices to rally. There was a decided improvement in the political trade situation some ways in the political trade situation somewhat pessimistic.

It was at a fashionable Southern resort the pretty New England maiden had been going strenuously with a vigorous young man from the West.

"Really," she protested, "I must stop love to keep on and on but I'm danced."

"Why, how can you say that?" he cried astounded as he escorted her to a seat.

"Don't think you're all right," she said just plump enough. "—National Monthly.
